

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The present invention provides a display panel drive system that can reduce the driver circuit power consumption and heat generation. The lighting rate of the light emitting elements in the display panel is calculated. The higher the lighting rate is, the higher the value of the voltage supplied to the driver circuit for driving the light emitting elements is set. The calculation of the lighting rate may be performed for each frame or each line of the display screen.